Most of Us Have Personal Interest In Stable Dollar

NEW YORK—The number of persons in the United States with a direct personal stake in a stable dollar through savings and other forms of personal thrift increased by several million last year and is now higher than ever before.

As a result of this trend, the overwhelming majority of American families and individuals now have the protection of some form of thrift, in life insurance and usually in other savings also.

The people's savings and protection funds have also reached new high levels. The figures show that the aggregate "nest egg" in life insurance and other accumulated long-term savings of individuals alone now adds up to around $250 billions, the equivalent of approximately $5,000 for every American household. This savings total is distinct from the amount of life insurance protection in force, which is more than half again as great. In the neighborhood of $60 billions additional have been built up behind private and public pension and retirement programs to guaranty their fulfillment.

Thus the stakes in the fight against inflation have never been so great nor so widespread as they are today. Along with the threat that steadily rising living costs and prices contains for our economy, the savings figures reinforce the need for stabilizing the dollar's buying power and halting its long-term erosion. In the past year alone, the cost of living rose by 3 per cent, clipping that much from what the dollar will buy. As a result, the dollar's buying power has already declined by 12 cents from as recently as 1950, and it will now buy only around half as much as it did in 1940.

Our Economy Leans To Better Times

NEW YORK—The American economy has a strong propensity toward good times and prosperity, according to a study of the swings of business activity in the United States from the beginning of the Republic to date.

In this 167-year period, business activity has risen in 90 years and declined in 71 years, a ratio of close to five to four in favor of prosperity, according to data compiled by the Cleveland Trust Company. In addition, business activity was steady in an aggregate of six years.

The bias toward good times has improved since the nation's earlier days. The figures show that business activity declined about as much as it rose in the period from 1790 to the middle of the last century. Since then, business activity was on the upgrade in half again as many years as it went down, even with the decade of the Thirties which was the longest and deepest depression on record.

Married Folks Live Longer Than Single

NEW YORK—Married people live longer, and it isn't—as comics have declared—that it just seems longer.

Statisticians report lower mortality experience among the married than among persons who remain single, or those whose marriage has been broken by death or divorce.

The married have an advantage as to mortality at every period of life, particularly prior to age 45. Among males at ages 20-44, for example, the death rate for the married is only about half that for the single, and an even smaller fraction of the rate for the widowed or divorced.

The difference is not so marked among females, and it is only recently that married women have had a lower mortality than the unmarried at every age. As late as 1940 the death rate at ages 20-24 was slightly higher for the married.

Disaster Service Is Costly Necessity

WASHINGTON—What does it cost per year to help American families stricken in disasters?

According to the American Red Cross it averaged out at about $3,000 for every hour of every day during the last fiscal year. The total came to a whopping $33,193,000.

This sum was spent on 290 relief operations conducted by the Red Cross.

Many Fishes

NEW YORK—More than 60 varieties of edible fish, some of them unknown elsewhere, are caught in the waters of the Bosphorus at Istanbul in Turkey. The fish in the Turkish Straits, which is reputed to be the most delectable in the world, lives and thrives between an underwater cold current from the north and a surface current from the Mediterranean. Caught between these two opposing forces the flavor of the fish is greatly improved.

About The Home

By Frances Dell

Fresh vegetables are plentiful now so you should be serving plenty of them to your family. The wonderful taste and texture of fresh vegetables is often hurt by wrong cooking methods.

Always prepare vegetables just before cooking. Most vegetables lose a good deal of their important vitamin C if they are allowed to stand after cutting and paring. Never soak them.

Leave vegetables' skin on when possible or pare very thin. Important vitamins and minerals lie just below the surface.

Wash perishable vegetables and store them in the refrigerator. Less perishable vegetables like potatoes and onions should e kept in a cool ventilated bin.

Always cook vegetables in as little water as possible. Keep vegetables tightly covered during cooking to protect flavor and color.

Don't over-cook vegetables. This is a great fault in southern vegetable cooking.

In certain sections people like their vegetables cooked with bacon. It is a good idea to season the water, add the bacon and cook for about twenty minutes before you add the vegetables.

IN FASHION NOW

Hair fashion designs have developed a new look in shape and length this fall. They have named it the siren lift. It features bangs or soft waves across the forehead, short curls or waves at the sides of the face, and the back is brushed up and cut much shorter than the sides.

This is a rather complicated thing and is not catching on with the fire the designers had hoped for. Instead, it has been reported that a short, soft, casual cut seems to be becoming quite popular. Also, extremely long hair is more in favor than in many recent years.

Women have been educated to the fact that long hair worn in a bun at the back of the neck has an aging effect on the face. Perhaps for this reason the long hair arrangement most popular, places the weight of the hair high up off the neck. The sides and front are kept soft and waved.

The new makeup for fall is really not new. It is a continuation of last fall. There, however, is a new face powder which contains ground pearls. It is used along with conventional powder to highlight a good feature or to give a lovely sheen to the empiexion.

Many items of makeup are being made with Royal jelly. Royal jelly is the latest "wonder" ingredient. It is quite expensive and there is no doubt that the claims made of what it can do to retard aging is wishful thinking. Any cosmetic containing royal jelly, we suggest not just because they contain royal jelly.

Father Markleaf

By c. h. r.

Speaking of our friend, Mr. Bryant—He was one of the County's most successful and I always listened with keen interest to his opinions. I once asked him what was the right of the big end of such a great amount of money in our farms—what would be needed in event of another war and farmers were caught with machine expenses in order to operate. He said—and I quite agree with him—that it would be a wonderful thing if it would work out all right. Due to the old days of hand labor the sharecropper and the tenant system as being unsatisfactory farmers were never satisfied with their tenants and tenants were loosing about for a better place." It did not support a living standard. And, Mr. Bryant said the worst feature was the greatest boys and girls left the farm as quickly as they could get through school. The brightest and best did not want to have to settle up and down a row a mule up and down a row all their lives. But, then with mechanization changed all of this and the work that formerly used to do. Labor left the towns and got nice jobs in factory and reached high standards. And the bright boys to stay on the farm, for them to work with tractors and machinery have shortened and be able to enjoy the social life without many of the hardships along this line, and on the farms, I saw evidence that although to help make the farm life attractive. Such as I saw in the world, it is a mark for good.

Mrs. Dickinson was in to see a perfectly shaped Indian head found on his farm. And Mr. Slatton was in to bring the original Pamplin clay pipe. It is an interesting story and pipes, and I hope to get it relating it next issue.

The size of our nation has many things. I remember I could have a fair chance during a presidential [illegible]. Now, the volume is so that secretaries bring in saying "You got so many letters 'for' and so many 'against.'" I am not inclined to worry about writing anyone just for political purposes.

Our friend Jonathan are known for their lovely annuals and flowers. He brought in something of interest: Lilacs in bloom at the end of the year!

Our editor notes that several of our daily newspapers have changed ownership. Latest was the paper I got "my start" on: the Morton Stars News, at Ocanaluftee. T. Borum was its publisher. It will be finally sold after 46 years on the job. I always considered the N. S. News Virginia's best weekly paper, and somehow it does not seem that such a long publication should end without proper attention to one of Virginia's oldest newspapermen—and his fine paper.

I should add, in that connection, that in entering the publishing field, I do so under vastly different conditions that did John T. Borum many years ago, or even your editor. We started out from scratch in 1931, and that was the first year I have ever seen.

I am delighted to receive the news that Vincent "Rip" Hardy of Appomattox, a V-12 graduate, has been promoted to the rank of Commander, U. S. Navy. "Rip" is now stationed at Great Point, Rhode Island, in command of Helicopter Squadron No. 11. He made a successful career decision in the Navy. He was a star football player in A. H. S.

Mayor Reports Town Affairs

Mayor C. T. Moses, Jr. has issued another weekly report on the town's activities, as follows:

"To the citizens of the Town of Appomattox:

"I want to take this opportunity to again thank everyone for their splendid cooperation in our "Fall Clean-Up Campaign."

"For the coming week, I am soliciting your assistance in helping us clean and beautify Lee - Grant Ave., from the corner at the Baptist Church to the intersection of the road opposite the former Presbyterian manse.

"During our clean-up campaign, if anyone in the cooperate limits has a vacant lot which they would like to have burned off, I would appreciate it if you would call the town manager, Mr. C. J. Hunter, and I promise you that we will see that it is taken care of as soon as possible.

"The Town Council, Mayor and Town employees are making a very diligent effort in trying to work out a suitable parking lot for you good people in order to relieve some of the congestion on Main Street. I feel sure that by next week we will have a solution worked out for this problem.

"When talking with our loyal Fire Chief, W. E. Hancock, and volunteer firemen, I find that unconsciously some of our citizens are retarding the speed of the firemen and equipment in proceeding to the fires. Whenever the fire alarm is sounded, make sure that you pull over to the curb and stop your vehicle. It is also very important that no vehicles except authorized ones enter the street on which the fire equipment is stationed. We all want to make sure that at no time we pass the fire engine when it is proceeding to or returning from a fire. Your cooperation will be greatly appreciated by everyone concerned.

"Our Fire Chief and the entire volunteer fire company have offered their services in acting as night watchmen for Friday and Saturday nights until the town hires a regular man. I would like to say that they are deputized and have full police authority. We all owe these very loyal men a great deal of gratitude and I want to publicly thank these gentlemen for the protection which they are giving everyone.

"Let's all put our shoulder to the wheel again, and see that Lee-Grant Ave. is swept clean and beautified as it should be.

Sincerely,
C. T. Moses, Jr."

Among the activities discussed the distribution of a booklet prepared by the Council, entitled "A Look at Virginia's Resources." This booklet was prepared for use of youth of the grade school level. It is available from the Monumental Publishing Co., Richmond, Va.

Another project receiving considerable attention by the Council in its business meeting was the Conservation Short Course for public school teachers. The two very successful short courses conducted at V. P. I. and W. & M. were reported and plans were made for the conducting of at least two and perhaps three such short courses in 1958.

J. J. Shoman, member of the Council returning from advanced study at Michigan State College, reported on information he had obtained relative to the Conservation education program carried on in other states.
